Extremely busy last couple of months

The last couple of months have been extremely busy, and that is a good thing! There have been some rather difficult situations I have dealt with but it is in those times I believe people are more open to listen to what I have to say!

We are still continuing to invest in the people God is putting in front of us.....Mostly middle and High School aged kids. We are even seeing an increase in the number of kids in services! Some of that may have to do with the fact they are getting their drivers license and starting to date. I am thrilled that kids are driving here, (with their significant others,) instead of opting to spend their Sunday mornings somewhere else.

Working with these kids has afforded us the opportunity to see immense blessings from the Lord but also experience immense pain and heartache.

With the blessings of the kids and their family I want to share just a small insight into some of the many things we are dealing with.

As I have talked about in the past, My son's friend Zalix has had a very rough year. His mom got out of jail last fall, then he found his dad dead around the 1st of the year. Now, his mother has hit another rough spot and is back in jail again. He has no one! We are in the process of legally obtaining custody of him until he turns 18. Please pray for him, his mom, and us as we try and navigate all the legalities of what to do. There are so many scenarios and situations where we just don't know what to do or what questions to ask.

Another situation involves my daughter's friend I have asked for prayers for in the past. She has been dealing with some serious mental and emotional issues lately and her parent have made the decision to seek professional help for her by putting her in a treatment center. The only problem is that the ONLY center they could find in the entire country that just happened to have an opening because of a cancellation is in Clearwater Florida. It is breaking the parent's heart to take her so far away. They cannot speak to her for the 1st few weeks but afterwards, they plan on splitting time staying in a hotel room close to the facility while she is there.

I have spoken to the dad and he told me that every single facility he called was booked solid and most had a waiting list. The treatment centers are being overwhelmed and the sentiment is because of COVID and the state of our nation this is only going to continue and get way worse. Possibly the effects could last for many years. That is why we are so passionate about pouring into the younger generation. Do not mistake me, I would love to talk to kids and adults alike, but it seems kids are more open to the message. To explain this, I always make a point to try and use the kids as a way to get in front of their parents. I cannot tell you the number of times I get calls from the parents and others in the community thanking me and my family for what we are doing for the kids. I tell them thank you and try and ask about them about their spiritual condition. I ask how they are doing and if I can help them in any way. Without fail so far, the response is always "I am good, but thanks for helping with the kids!"

I was blessed to have the opportunity to attend the annual mission committee meeting in Texarkana this past week. I had a great time there and was able to share my passion and vision with the committee in depth. I would like to say thank you to all the committee members for their time, efforts, and interest in finding ways to help further the Gospel around the world!
