Sunday Morning 7

I cannot believe November is gone and the Christmas season is upon us.

We have a lot to be thankful for as 2021 comes roaring to a close. Definitely, 2021 had its challenges but through it all, God has continued to bless! There was not as much mass outreach as I would liked to have had this year due to a myriad of circumstances, so we chose to really concentrate on building up the people God has placed in front of us.

I must confess, I have mixed feeling concerning this group. On the one hand, I have been so encouraged that a core group of teenagers has remained committed to Both God and the church in attendance and all around great attitudes. Their thirst for knowing God and guidance in their lives has been nothing short of amazing! They are all very eager for Sunday mornings. They listen attentively and ask a LOT of questions. We are currently going through the Book of Revelation and lessons on personal finance. The latter, preparing them for when they graduate High school and transition to adulthood.

This is where my feelings are mixed. The sobering reality has begun to sink in that my time with them on an almost daily basis is quickly coming to an end. Four of the six “regulars” are graduating this year. My faith is strengthened knowing they have been given the foundations to thrive spiritually and that God has great plans for all of them but I am saddened I only have a little while left with them.

I also feel as if I am wading back into the unknown of trying to “replace the pipeline” with new disciples. My daughter will be starting High school next year and we are praying we can begin another round of ministry through her friends and their families. She is very active in basketball and club volleyball. We are already beginning to foster new relationships with those around her. Please join me in prayer for this next upcoming phase of ministry here. I am confident God has more and maybe even bigger plans in store.

Because of the nature of gatherings and meetings, we will not have our annual Christmas party this year. It is unfortunate as that was the highlight of our year and very well attended. Instead, this year, we will be hosting individual families in our home for a private Christmas. This will allow us to hopefully connect on a more personal level. Please be in prayer for the 4-5 families we will be hosting in the month of December.
